Michael Dickson

Michael Ligon Dickson is an artist, architect, designer & illustrator. As the former senior principal & director of design at one of New Mexico's largest & oldest Architectural firms, Michael has designed many of the contemporary buildings around our state. He has an intense love of our state's architecture, landscape & people, which have become the principle subject of his drawings & paintings. Michael's architectural mentor was the famous architect, George Clayton Pearl, for which the new UNM School of Architecture is named.

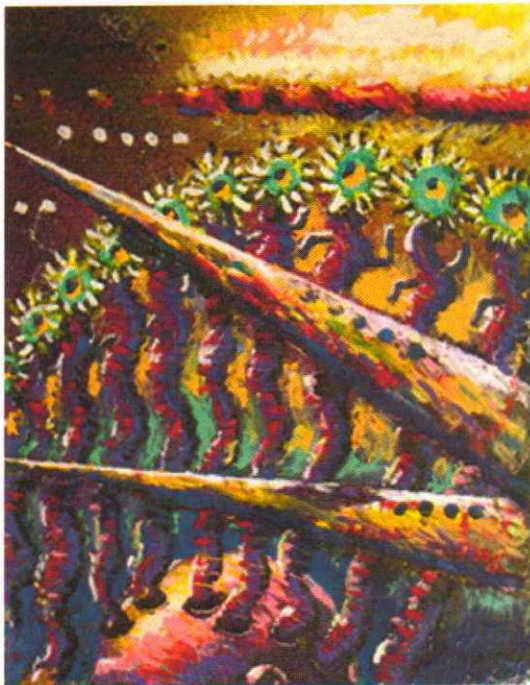

In 2007, Mr Dickson was commissioned by the State Bar Association to design their annual convention poster using his painting titled "Rule of Law". Additionally, his watercolor sketch portrait of Justice Sandra Day O'Connor was presented to her at their conference at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Michael loves to use all media. Consequently, his most of his works end up in the mixed-media category. Some of his paintings use less common media such as poster paint or even dirt on some occasions.
