

Carolyn Lankford

Carolyn paints to capture the soul of a place, to communicate its spirit & her joy in it, to strike a responsive chord so the viewer feels he, too, knows this place. Although Southwestern landscapes are her first love, all the works of this New Mexico painter reveal love of color & texture. Her work is described as painterly & sensitive, yet realistic.

The artist obtained her summa cum laude degree from the University of New Mexico studying Russian history & anthropology. She then thought her creative drive would be channeled into research & writing. Instead, she realized an intense desire to communicate through painting.

Carolyn now lives by the Rio Grande in southern New Mexico where she spends long hours at her easel with husband & cat as companions.
