

Erma Morrison

My name is Erma Morrison, I live in Tijeras, NM. I was born & raised on a small farm in Los Lunas. I was blessed with five children and am a grandmother of nine! I worked for Smith's Grocery Store & retired from there in 2008.

I started painting in 1992. I had signed up for an art class and discovered that day that painting was something I was going to pursue. I signed on for a few more classes, then went off on my own exploration.

I mostly paint in acrylics. Chickens are my favorite subject matter, maybe because they remind me of my home, where I was raised, on the farm. I also enjoy building small storage chests, like toy boxes and potato bins and paint my designs on them.

My inspiration comes from the Lord. Bringing joy to others through my paintings gives me a feeling of accomplishment.

When people look at my artwork, I want them to understand that we are all special in God's eyes. God blesses everyone with a unique gift and every gift should be used to glorify Him.

I entered one of my paintings for the first time in the New Mexico State Fair in 2008 and to my surprise it came in First. That was a good day! I plan to enter again in future years, the good lord willing.
